The Challenge: More than 5 million customers and 500,000 products can go bad in a single day at a large corporation. That puts the responsibility for quality and efficiency squarely on the shoulders of the IT department. With a need to keep the organization on track, IT project managers and teams must account for a staggering amount of data. It's a challenge, but one the IT department of Applied Service Solutions (ASX) was up to. The Solution: The team began with a detailed look at their current IT projects. They identified strengths and weaknesses and quickly created a prioritized list. Then the team's requested project began to take shape. A comprehensive business focus, coupled with specific challenges and objectives, brought about the first round of completed projects. After a review, IT project managers determined how to best use the information. Their work was easier with an accurate top-down view of the project landscape. The Result: The IT project management team will soon be charged with the primary task of IT procurement. Armed with the insight they have acquired on the status of completed projects, along with recommendations for future projects, the team has the ability to take on the responsibility with confidence and efficiency. The next time an IT project challenges your team's ability to work efficiently, you can rely on Applied Service Solutions to help you get the job done.October 2018 SYDNEY • One of Australia's most experienced bushfires experts has urged people in Sydney's north west to consider leaving the city until a months-long fire emergency declaration lapses at the end of October.
